JEWELLERS' ANNUAL FEAST.

BRILLIANT DINNER OF THE NEW-YORK ASSOCIATION AT DELMONICO'S.

TWO HUNDRED MEN TURN OUT FOR THE NINE-TEENTH YEARLY GATHERING-MANY PROMI-NENT GUESTS-FLOQUENT SPEECHES

GRAVE AND GAY, THE ORDER OF THE EVENING.

Last evening for the nineteenth time the New-York Jewellers' Association enjoyed its annual dinner. The big dining-hall of Delmonico's was the scene, and there were about 200 covers for the mem-bers and invited guests. The menu-card consisted of an oblong leaflet of six pages, in a card-board cover, the upper right-hand corner of which was represented as turned down and fastened of the person entitled to it engrossed beneath the picture. These were distributed with special refer-ence in the allotment of the design to the most conspicuous characteristic of the person receiving.
Much amusement was thus created at the beginning of the feast by a review of the designs.

ELLIUE POOT'S CLEVER SALLIES.

Rarely at any annual dinner are such interesting speeches heard as those delivered last evening by Eithu Root, responding for "Our Country"; by Judge-elect Edward T. Bartlett, who spoke to "The Judiciary"; by Frederic Taylor, who talked of "New-York City"; by District-Attorney Ridgway, who responded to the toast, "Our Guests"; by exjudge Noah Davis, whose theme was "Auld Lang Syne"; by the Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water, who dilated on the merits and charms of "The Laddes"; by Herbert Ketcham, who treated of "The Social Side of Commercial Life," and by Mr. Tiffany, who received an ovation when he was unexpectedly called to his feet, and the Rev. Dr. J. W. Brown, who was also required to say something from a lower table, at which he was quietly scated.

Mr. Root's speech was exceptionally brilliant. As he arose he announced that Judge Davis had asked him whether the toast "Our Country" included Hawaii, and he had replied that it included every yood of land whether within or without the circle of the ocean, where men are seeking freedom from despotism or monarcheal rule—a remark which produced prolonged cheering.

"Ours is a land," the speaker said, "where has grown up the best, the freest people on the earth, and one in which every man is most favored by heaven in finding his true place. We often forget the value of the benefits we enjoy. We have witnessed, this month, the power of the people to give effect to their belled at the polls, and the incledent was the most encouraging illustration of the successful working of our political system and of the interest of the people in governing themselves, which has occurred in a quarter of a century."

ENTHUSIASM FOR JUDGE BARTLETT.

en Judge Bartlett nrose there was a tremen dous outburst of applause. The speaker said hu-morously that he had been assured, when invited to speak, that he had been nominated and elected because, as a lawyer, he had been the counsel of because, as a lawyer, he had been the counsel of the Jewellers' Association, and therefore it was his daily to come now, as he had done for many years previously, to the annual dinner. In concluding, he said: "We are met, not as membered any particular party, but as citizens of a great Republic. No matter how we may differ as to questions of boiley, we are all laboring for one resulting good of our country. While many things enter into the National prosperity, no feator is more important than a pure, intelligent, independent, courageous judiciary. The final asylum of liberty, and the highest function of the judiciary is the last refuge of an oppressed people, the final asylum of liberty, and the highest function of the judiciary is to consider and make plain those principles of the fundamental law upon which at this structure which we call government. In see highest form of government the people are the people forms of legislative, executive and judicial methods, are but the declurations of their will and the evidence of their power. The people regard those set above them, not as masters, but as servants. The power that creates them can desirely been, and it is the salvation of Republicanism that this reserve power, once vested in kings, now sleeps under the shadows of our institutions, to be invoked at times by the people through the ballot." Reviewing the cosmopolitan features of the metro-polis, he introduced all manner of dialect, repre-senting the Irishman, Englishman, Frenchman, Italian and Chinaman, keeping the audience in a constant roar of laughter, for more than twenty minutes, when he suddenly changed his remarks to an eloquent and stirring tribute to the city, its influence upon the country, and to the forces which, entering our gates in the person of immigrants from other lands, had been distributed throughout all our territory, and were silently creating, from generation to generation, a newer and stronger race.

the nineteenth dinner given annually by the association, he had been a guest. He turned to good account his text. "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot?" by referring to the ancestry of Judge Sartlett, and said the principles which Josish Bartlett represented as a signer of the Declaration of independence should not be forgotten by the children of the men who represented the same principles to-day. He congratulated the people of New-York, and New-Jersey as well, for their deliverance from the political dangers which threatened both Commonwealths.

The speech of Mr. Ridgway on "Our Guests" was in an excellent and non-partisan temper. Dr. Van De Water's tribute to "The Ladies" was in his best style, and Herbert Ketcham spoke admirably on "The Social Side of Commercial Life." Altogether the dinner was characterized as one of the best, if not the best, in the history of the association.

THE REVOLUTION IN BRAZIL.

THE FIGHTING WILL SOON BE FORCED.

The Brazilian merchant cruiser Nietherov has sailed for the South, and the America will soon follow. Admiral Mello soon will have an opportunity to prove his strength or his weakness. The arrival of the Pelxoto fleet in Brazilian waters will bring the revolution to a focus, and naval men will watch with interest this first test in actual conflict of the many modern devices for offence and defence.

ARE THE REBEL RESOURCES EXHAUSTED?

ARE THE REBEL RESOURCES EXHAUSTED? From The Philadelphia Ledger.

The latest official information from Brazil—which is by no means reliable—is to the offer that Admiral Mello is blocked up in the harbor of Riowith only two vessels, and that the Government of Peixto is accorded general support. It seems quite probable that the rebels should have exhausted their resources, for they have made no substantial gains since the first revolt, and have had no means, so far as is known, of obtaining supplies.

AN INTERESTING QUESTION.

From the Boston Heraid.

The efforts that the regular Government of Brazil is making to put down the naval rebellion that has taken place there by the use of steamships purchased both here and in Europe, and fitted out as makeshift men-of-war, are highly interesting, as they are likely to make it evident whether modern war vessels are so superior and invulnerable as public opinion has credited them with being.

From The Baltimore American.
So far the war in Brazil has resulted in a great waste of powder, but a very small sacrifice of human lives, it is to be hoped that the war will continue to be a farce until peace is established, and the Republic put on a more solid basis than it has been heretofore.

MUSIC.

THE BETHOVEN STRING QUARTET.

Pending the opening of their campaign by Mr. Brodsky and his associates in January, New-York is dependent on the Beethoven String Quartet for its concerts of chamber music by local artists.

The club, which has Mr. Gustav Dannreuther at its head, has labored faithfully and with devotion to high ideals for seven years, and it was a pleasant thing to observe at the first concert of its eighth season last night that it has gained a clientele encouraging in numbers and appreciative, The concert was given in the tastefully designed and chastely decorated hall of the Mendelssohn Glee Club, at No. 119 West Fortleth-st.-a music Glee Club, at No. 119 West Fortleth-st.—a musicroom which offers every advantage to entertainments of this character. The programme consisted of Schubert's Quartet for Strings in G-major, op.
116; a cavatina and minuet, also for quartet by strings, by A. de Castilion and Benjamin Godard, and a quintet in B-flat major, for pianoforte and strings, by the Italian planist Sgambati. The two short middle numbers were musical tichits, obviously inserted in the scheme for the sake of variety and diversion; and they were needed, for with all due deference to the genius of Schubert and the unquestioned talent of Liszi's favorite Italian publi, it must be confessed that their long works subjected the audience to considerable of a strain, one of the characteristics of that master's instrumental works, but its melodles are wanting in pregnancy, and for charm it is much inferior to the quartets in A-minor and D-minor. Sgambati's quintet challenges respect for the seriousness of its plan, but it has meny waste places, and too often the listener is kept wondering why the stringed instruments were enlisted at all, since they say mothing which is not more fully and effectively expressed by the pianoforte. Mrs. Dannreuther asstated the club in this number, and the performance here, as in the music which preceded it, gave evidence of great care and intelligence in study. room which offers every advantage to entertain-

CRANBERRIES A SUCCESS IN ENGLAND.

From The Philadelphia Press.

Medford, N. J., Nov. 22.—The American Cranberry Growers' Association has been successful in introducing this American fruit in foreign markets. Large shipments of New-Jersey berries have been sent from Philadelphia to Liverpool and London markets, and they have been sold at a good profut, notwithstanding the fact that many of the dealers had never seen them before. A. J. Rider, secretary of the association, was chosen as its representative and he personally attended to the preparing of the cranberries in the American style and had all the principal restsurants bountifully supplied with the sauce, hoping to bring this delicious fruit beforthe public in time for the holiday seasons.

The sauce was thoroughly tested and it was thought advisable to place the berries in the Liverpool fruit markets. Notice was given to provision dealers and the stewards of all the large hotels in England. This resulted in a large sale of the berries at $2.25 per crate of thirty-two quarts, netting a profit of about 20 cents per crate. Berries were selling in Philadelphia markets at the same time for $1.60 per crate.

He reviewed the meetings of the club generally, spoke of the appropriation of $100 made by the club to a Princeton propaganda carried on by the club, and of the $109 offered as a prize to the freshman passing the highest entrance examination at New-York, and said that the club had again captured the Stinnecke prize of $1,599. He called attention to two deaths during the last year, James Frederick Stebbins and James McIntosh Cox. The membership of the club at the present time was 3d.

From The Philadelphia Record.

There are ramors afloat that Minister Thurston will have his passports returned to him in consequence of his indignant answer to the Bloom report. There is little danger of the perpetration of such a folly. It is the business of Minister Thurston to set the country right as to the imputations in the Blount report discrediting the Government he represents. The Minister was on the spot, and is a competent witness. The way to arrive at the truth is to hear all sides dispassionately. Minister Thurston has contributed a very interesting chapter to the discussion.

From The Hartford Courant.
Now that Minister Thurston has got through toying with that unlucky Blount report, it must occur to Mr. Stevens that the remains are hardly worth powder and shot.

From The Commercial Advertiser.

In his wonderful report Mr. Blount makes a labored attempt to fix upon the public the impression that he was strictly judicial and impartial. In a few sentences Minister Thurston punctures this prefersion, and shows that Blount was exactly the opposite. The Blount report is a stigma upon the Government.

THE BASIS OF BLOUNT'S MISINFORMATION.

From The New-york Sun.

Mr. Thurston directs attention to a fact patent on the face of the report, that it consists exclusively of prepared affidavits, or of answers to leading questions put by Mr. Blount himself at private interviews, no one else being present but his stenographer. In no instance was a representative of the Hawaiian Government allowed to produce counter testimony, or by the cross-examination of witnesses to contradict them out of their own mouths. Mr. Thurston says, what every lawyer knows, that this is a dishonest substitute for the thorough and judicial inquiry which it was the duty of Mr. Clevelacts emissary to make, if he made any at all. NOT SO FOOLISH AS TO SEND HIM HOME

Minister Thurston's scathing condemnation of the one-sided Blount report has enraged the Administration, but the President will hardly go to the extent of handing the Hawaiian representative his pasports. President Dole could return the compliment, and then what a diplomatic kettle of fish it would be!

BLOUNT'S WHOLE ARGUMENT DISPROVED.

The whole argument upon which Mr. Blount bases his claim that the Queen was deposed by a minority of her subjects and only through the influence of the American Minister and American troops, is disproved by the official records as well as by Mr. Thurston. IS THERE ANY QUESTION OF VERACITY: From The Boston Journal.

Democratic papers tell us that it has now become a "question of veracity" between Minister Thurston and Mr. Blount. Well, on that basis, which witness is the more entitled to credit—Mr. Thurston, who saw the events which he describes, or Mr. Blount, who picked up his data from gossip and at second hand?

THE WORDS OF A WELL-INFORMED MAN.

From The Boston Advertiser.

Mr. Thurston's declarations are those of an able, upright, well-informed man, a foremost resident of Hawaii, a leading manager of the late revolution, and the chairman of the committee dispatched from Honolulu to Washington the next day after the Provisional Government obtained control, bearing with him the offer of annexation from that Government to our own. There is no more reason to doubt his truthfulness and intention to be fair than there is to deny to Mr. Blount possession of the same qualities; that is to say, no reason at all in either case, except as passion usurps the place of reason. COMPREHENSIVE AND STRAIGHTFORWARD.

From The Boston Traveller.

The statement of Minister Thurston of Hawaii which is published to-day is a comprehensive and straightforward contradiction of the alleged facts contained in the report of Commissioner Blount. BLOUNT'S GROUND TAKEN FROM UNDER

From The Albany Journal.

Minister Thurston's dignified personal reply to Paramount Blount's partisan and one-sided accusa-tions leaves the too-eager commissioner very little ground on which to stand EVERY ISSUE SQUARELY MET.

From The Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Minister Thurston's statement in reply to the charges made by Mr. Blount against the leaders of the riawailan revolution and the Provisional Government is straightforward, dignified and to the point. He evades nothing, but meets squarely every issue, of fact presented by Mr. Blount. The theory of the latter and of Secretary Gresham is that the revolution was the result of a conspiracy on the

PRINCETON CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

FIRST MEETING OF THE SEASON-A GRILL-ROOM
SUPPER FOLLOWS FUSINESS.

Part of the American Minister, and that American troops were used to overthrow the Queen. Mr. Thurston shows that this theory is absolutely false. Demonstrating this, he leaves the Administration nothing to stand on.

From The Washington Post.

Speaking familiarly, we should say that "the rules of diplomatic etiquette" are binding on Minister Thurston to exactly the same extent that they are binding upon the State Department, and that Mr. Thurston is warranted in measuring the volume of his debt of courtesy by the standard that the Administration has adopted in its treatment of him. An official document has been published by authority in which Mr. Thurston is called a liar and a conspirator. Without making any charges or insinuations against the authority, Mr. Thurston repels the charge. Was he the first to violate those "rules of diplomatic etiquette?" Is he, indeed, warranted in supposing that those "rules" obtain in his case any longer?

Many American women have a studied objection to facing a camera or even to having a painting or minature made. Mrs. John Sherman is among the number, and has not had a picture made since she was quite young. So strong, indeed, is Mrs. Sherman's objection to picture making that she declined to join the Cabinet families in having a group taken when the administration, in which the Senator had been Secretary of the Treasury, went out of office. It has been customary for the Cabinet officers and their wives to have a group taken for a gift to the President, but Mrs. Sherman could not be prevailed upon to consent even then to face the lens.

Memorial Resolutions.

interested the preparation of his fext-books, when death intervened.

In the midst of the pupils of the seriod he displayed a wealth of parental surfacent has made many a young midster reher. Preserving in principle yet considerate of youth, heartily sympathetic, yet eminently practical factomes, his period and guidance were never sought in vaio, and a volume of appacelative letters from the beneficiaries of the school in some measure memorializes the extent of the value of his prioual relation to them. Fitted for his woll by nature, by technical education, and by contributive advantages of position, his success was not supprished, but that it, such abilities and atterments he should have united a modesty as rare as it was becault it is indeed astonishing.

It solved. That in cony of these resolutions, suitably engrossed, be sent to Mrs. Auchanaty and that there be published in the daily repers and Frigious propers of the city.
